Be ready with your booking/itinerary number, account email, phone number you used, etc., so you're not stuck fumbling while waiting.

If you're calling from abroad, check time zone differences. Though some lines operate 24/7, convenience improves if you call during "normal" hours.

Make sure you have any relevant documentation (booking confirmation, receipt, the date/time of travel, etc.).

If you get a long hold time, ask politely if there's a callback option or schedule a time for them to call you (some big services offer that).

---

4. What to have ready before you call

To make the conversation as efficient as possible, gather the following:

- Your full name and the name on the booking.
- The email address used for the booking.
- The itinerary or confirmation number (often labeled "ITINERARY #" on your booking).
- Date(s) of travel (flight date, hotel check-in/out date, etc.).
- Booking type: flight, hotel, rental car, package.
- The issue you're calling about, clearly stated: e.g., "I want to cancel my hotel stay in Rome booked for June 15–18, booking #12345."
- Any relevant supporting documents: confirmation emails, screenshots, charges on your credit card.
- Payment method details (credit card used, transaction date) if there's a billing issue.
- What outcome you want: refund, credit, change of date, upgrade, etc.

---

5. What to say during the call & how to frame your request

When you're connected to an agent, keeping things clear and courteous helps. Here's an approach:

- Politely greet the agent: "Hello, thank you for your time."
- State your booking reference and your name: "My name is [Your Name], and my booking number is [#]."
- Briefly explain your issue.
- Provide any relevant background.
- Clearly state what you want done.
- Ask for timeframes and next steps.

• If needed, request escalation politely.
• Ask for confirmation or reference of the call.
• Thank the agent.

- State your booking reference and your name: "My name is [Your Name], and my booking number (or itinerary number) is [#]."

- Briefly explain your issue: "I'm calling about booking number [#], a hotel stay from [dates] in [city]. I need to [cancel/change/ask about refund/etc.]."

- Provide any relevant background: "When I booked, I selected pay-later and the hotel just informed me they cancelled my room because the card expired."

- Clearly state what you want them to do: "I would like to request a refund of the deposit" or "I'd like to change my return flight to [date/time]."

- Ask for timeframes and next steps: "Could you tell me how long the refund will take?" or "What are the change fees, and is there any fare difference I'll need to pay?"

- If you need to escalate, ask politely.

"Is it possible to speak with a supervisor if we cannot resolve this?" At the end of the call, ask for a confirmation number or reference for the call, and ask what to expect next: "Will I receive an email confirmation of what we discussed? When should I follow up if I don't hear back?" Thank the agent.
